

Dinner-Debate with Ana Stanič

PREPARING FOR INDEPENDENCE: LESSONS LEARNED FROM NEWLY BORN STATES

Ajaccio (Corsica) Friday 1st April 2016

Ana Stanič is the founder of E&A Law Limited, an innovative law firm based in London which advises states, companies and financial institutions on issues of international and EU law. She is ranked amongst UK's leading public international lawyers by Chambers & Partners and Legal 500. She is also a lecturer of international arbitration law at the University of Dundee in Scotland.

Prior to moving to London, Ana Stanič worked for the Slovenian Ministry of Economic Relations and the Slovenian Central Bank. She has an LLM from Cambridge University and a LLB and B. Commerce (Finance and Banking) from the University of New South Wales, Australia. Her research at Cambridge University on international law on financial state succession assisted Slovenia and Croatia during the negotiations concerning the Yugoslav state succession. Her thesis was published in 2001 in the European Journal of International Law, a leading international law journal. For the last few years, Ana has undertaken research on the Catalan and Scottish cases of independence, has advised on issues of international law in respect thereof and has spoken at numerous conferences.

Ms. Stanič is the keynote speaker at the Coppieters Dinner-Debate. She will address secession and state succession from an international law perspective; share her experiences and observations about what lessons can be drawn from newly independent states, such as her home state of Slovenia; and provide recommendations about how to prepare for independence and what to expect in negotiations.

Attendees are welcome to raise points, comments and questions around these topics during the dinner.
